

Unique Places to Visit in Utah

With amazing outdoors, Utah is one of the most loved holiday destinations of travelers. Amazing ski resorts, national parks, and other wonders make Utah what it is today. When people visit Utah, they can explore some of the amazing sites here. Salt Lake City is one of the most visited locations here. Other highlights of the state are Moab and St. George. The best season to visit Utah is during winter. This is because Utah closes many of its national parks during summers. However, if you are not a fan of snowfall, then you can come here at any point in time, and you will still have a lot to explore in Utah. You can visit the city alone or can bring your family along. The place is an ideal destination for both.

We have prepared a list of some of the unique places you can visit in Utah during any season. Let's have a look at the list. Also, check out JetBlue Flight Booking to find the best flights to Utah at reasonable rates.

1. Zion National Park

Zion National Park is located not very far away from Las Vegas. One must come here to experience the best scenic views of the city. Sparkling waterfalls, beautiful red rock cliffs, and mesmerizing views are some of the very few things one would love about this place. Highlights of this national park that attract tourists are Zion-Mount Carmel Highway and Zion Canyon Scenic Drive. People come here for hiking, riding, and enjoying sightseeing along the way.

2. Canyonlands National Park

Canyonlands is a colorful and beautiful national park with so many adventurous activities to do. This place is perfect for people looking for a quiet, peaceful time away from the hustle and bustle of the city. One of the three most amazing parts of the national park is Island in the Sky. You and your family can experience vistas like never before from this point. Tourists love to see the Mesa Arch on the island in the sky. It is best to come here during the sunrise or the sunset to see the wonders of nature. The other two parts of the park are The Maze and Needles District, which are also worth visiting.

3. Park City Mountain

If you're looking for the perfect place to ski in the western USA, there is nothing better than the Park City Mountains. 11,928 feet above sea level, these mountains are jaw-droppingly beautiful and covered with the blanket of soft white snow. It is the world's most popular ski resort. You and your kids can play with snow and do amazing snow activities in Park City Mountain. You can come here and take ski lessons or join tour packages to get the most out of place.

4. Moab

The town of Moab is best known for the outdoor adventures one can have in the Southwestern parts of the US. This town is very close to Dead Horse Point State Park, Canyonlands National park, and Arches National Park. This is why you get endless opportunities to go as adventurous you would like to be when you visit Moab. You and your friends can go hiking, rafting, road tripping, or other off-road adventures and make your trip memorable. The best seasons to visit Moab are spring or fall because the weather can get too hot or too cold here during other times of the year.

5. Dead Horse Point State Park

Located just outside the Moab town, this state park offers the best lookouts in comparison to any other state park in Utah. You get to see cliff walls as high as 2,000 feet at a distance for here. You can take a ride on the Potash Road here and can enjoy Thelma and Louise Point on the left where the famous motion picture Thelma and Louise was shot. To get the best vistas from the Dead Horse Point State Park, you must take a walk or ride along the walking trail by the rim.

6. St. George

St. George town is as interesting for the outdoor activities as it is for the in-town adventures. Situated close to the Zion National park, one can rent a room in the town and enjoy the city, and the neighboring attracts without wasting much time on travel. Another tourist location very close to the city is the Snow Canyon State Park which not many people know about is worth a visit. The attractions inside the city for tourists to explore are Brigham Young Winter Home Historical Site and St. George Temple.

7. Great Salt Lake

Situated on the borders of Salt Lake City, Great Salt Lake is a peaceful and calm place to spend a wonderful evening by yourself. It is a 72 miles long, 50 feet deep, and 34 miles wide freshwater lake with amazing mountain scenes visible from the shore. Because of a great fall in the water table, the lake dried up over the years, and we got the great salt lake desert by the edge of the lake. On the southern part of the lake, you can find bathing beaches and parks for you to relax.

8. Manti-La Sal National Forest

To get the best and close view of nature and wildlife, you must visit the Manti-La Sal National Forest. This forest gives you the opportunity to click some amazing wildlife portraits, hike in the trails, and camp amongst the wood. You will also get to see many water bodies such as lakes, ponds, and water streams flowing amongst the forests. You and your family can also enjoy fishing in the water bodies, but you need to take permission for camping and fishing from the US Forest Service. It is best to join a guided tour to get to see each part of the forest without getting lost in the woods.

Final Statement

Utah is a beautiful place with some of the most mesmerizing views from sky-high mountains, amazing wildlife, and many trails to enjoy. It is a perfect blend of national and state parks surrounding pretty small towns. Along with that, these cities also have a lot to offer and have amazing restaurants and hotels. Tourists can stay here and get a taste of the local delights of the state.
